CN president(s) Jim Samples The CN City era (often shortened to City) was the fourth era of Cartoon Network. It began on June 14, 2004, replacing Powerhouse, and was the main branding image of the network from that point until April 2, 2006, when the Yes! era began; the City bumpers (with later additions) were still shown until May 31, 2007. The first program to air under the CN City era was The Powerpuff Girls. The era was named for its bumpers, which were set in a CGI city and featured CN characters interacting with one another. These bumpers were produced by Animal Logic. The City era is notable for the new logo it brought with it, as well as the female announcer (an actress from California named Nicole Vicius) and the slogan "This is Cartoon Network." The City era saw the emergence of more Cartoon Network Original Series, which began to replace both the classic cartoons. Live-action programming also began airing on CN during this era. Bumpers An overhead view of the city. In this era, CN debuted an updated version of its original logo (with the checkerboard motif retained and the "C" and "N" blocks being the centerpiece, with "CARTOON NETWORK" spelled out below them) and a new slogan, "This is Cartoon Network!" The bumpers introduced as part of the re-brand featured 2D cartoon characters from its shows interacting in a CGI city composed of sets from their shows. Bumpers were a big part of the CN City era's appeal. This was mostly due to the music, scenery, and the individual stories of each bumper (which ranged from a sixty-second bumper of the CN logo on a billboard to Juniper Lee trying to beat the Powerpuff Girls to the subway). There were many different sets and themes for the bumpers including the subway, movie theater, city hall, daytime, nighttime, Easter, Halloween, Christmas, and Summer. The Now/Then bumpers in this era were replaced with CGI sets of locations in the City. White discs showed characters from the show that was on now, next (rarely), then, and (rarely) later. The announcer for these bumpers was jazz and techno-oriented, cycling between daytime and nighttime. One of the more notable periods of CN City was Cartoon Network Summer in 2005. In the CN universe, it was a party that lasted from day to night, featuring a signature theme song and programming that introduced several "modern classics" such as Camp Lazlo and The Life and Times of Juniper Lee. Programming At the beginning of this era, the programming was largely the same as it was in the Powerhouse era. However, throughout 2004 and 2005, many of the original Cartoon Cartoons ended and were removed from the network. By the end of this era, the only Cartoon Cartoons to still be in production were The Grim Adventures of Billy & Mandy, Ed, Edd n Eddy, and Codename: Kids Next Door. On September 12, 2005, due to popular demand, CN re-introduced The Cartoon Cartoon Show, a half-hour program featuring episodes of older Cartoon Cartoon Show, and Codename: Kids Next Door. Only a few classics remained, such as Tom and Jerry and Looney Tunes. The CN City era was not first era of Cartoon Network to air live-action programming (Big Bag and Small World, as well as the movie Osmosis Jones, had aired previously), but it was the first to gradually promote live-action on a larger scale, which was controversial among some long-time fans. In November 2005, the network aired live-action films, which was met with some online and media fanfare. Some of these films, such as The Goonies, Honey, I Shrunk the Kids, Batman, and Men in Black, were fully live-action. In 2006, more live-action made its way to the network, Zixx, a Canadian live-action series with CGI-elements, briefly aired on Saturday mornings beginning on Ianuary 21, and Fall eras continued to push live-action on the network, culminating in the CN Real programming block of the Noods era. Strangely in other countries, these bumpers (such as in Japan made the Powerpuff Girls Z bumpers and in Europe made the Amazing Adrenalini Brothers and Robotboy bumpers (such as in Japan made the Powerpuff Girls Z bumpers and in Europe made the Amazing Adrenalini Brothers and Robotboy bumpers) were made by various companies. on his CN City Facebook page, his team had originally pitched to make a TV show based on the CN City era, but such plans never materialized for unknown reasons. During the commercial breaks of The Cartoon Cartoon Show, the block uses the Dexter's Lab, The Powerpuff Girls, and Courage the Cowardly Dog bumpers. The main location of the bumpers was the City of Townsville from The Powerpuff Girls. Many bumpers feature the last names of famed animators/directors for the Looney Tunes shorts (e.g. McKimson). The location names from the network's classic shows (such as Orbit City from The Jetsons, Bedrock from The Flintstones, and the Big City from Sheep in the Big City were referenced in the bumpers. Aku, Bunny Bravo, Starfire, Velma Dinkley, Numbuh 5, Fuzzy Lumpkins, Kiva Andru, the Time Squad characters do not talk in any of the bumpers but appear numerously. The Sector V Treehouse, Billy's house, Dexter's house, Charles Darwin Middle School, Pop's Moon Palace, the Bagge Farmhouse, Foster's Home, the Cul-de-Sac, Andy's house and other places were redesigned for the CN City bumpers. In the Dexter's Home, the Cul-de-Sac, Andy's house, Charles Darwin Middle School, Pop's Moon Palace, the Bagge Farmhouse, Foster's Home, the Cul-de-Sac, Andy's house and other places were redesigned for the CN City bumpers. In the Grim Adventures of Billy & Mandy bumpers, Billy's house is shown to be very far from the Powerpuff Girls Characters are based on their appearance in The Powerpuff Girls Movie and the final two seasons from the cartoon. For unknown reasons, Grim, Billy and Mandy resemble their Grim and Evil designs in some of their own bumpers, as opposed to their more refined looks from their solo show The Grim Adventures of Billy and Mandy. Many bumpers feature cameos by Irwin, and he even had some of his own bumpers, as opposed to their more refined looks from their solo show The Grim Adventures of Billy and Mandy. Many bumpers feature cameos by Irwin, and he even had some of his own bumpers. This may have indicated his popularity amongst fans. Assets created for the Ed, Edd n Eddy bumpers were reused for the Squirrel Boy bumpers, as opposed to their more refined looks from their solo show The Grim Adventures of Billy and Mandy. Kevin and Sarah from Ed, Edd n Eddy are the only characters from Johnny Bravo and Samurai Jack appear in the city, both shows do not have their own bumpers. The reason for this is unknown. The 2005 Movement Ink bumpers (to promote the network's "Get Animated" campaign) are the only bumpers to have continuing storyline. With the Mayor announcing the construction and opening of the Movement Ink building to the City, which ends with all the characters using the newly made facility. The Movement Ink 2005 bumper that features a fly through of the building is the only bumper to feature live-action extras. This is reminiscent of the ads from previous eras that included live-action extras and cartoons interacting. Characters from Megas XLR were no longer featured in the bumpers after Summer 2005 as the show was cancelled during that year. In the Summer 2006 bumpers, the gas station was replaced with a stadium. In September 2006, the transition (with the CN logo in a red background) was shown at the end of each City bumpers, the characters never appear outside of their own shows' bumpers. As a result, they are never seen interacting with other shows in the city. This is probably due to the fact that Class of 3000 was the last show to be introduced during the City era before its demise in 2007. The show's late inclusion was likely the reason why no bumpers have been produced that feature Class of 3000 characters in other bumpers. The same can almost be said for Squirrel Boy characters. While they appear in the Summer 2006 and Cartoon Theatre 2006 bumpers, they never directly interact with other shows either. Unlike other bumpers, they never directly interact with other shows either.
